

RBJ's Power 30 Higher Education

By: Rochester Business Journal Staff October 29, 2021

The Rochester Business Journal's inaugural Power List program continues this week with our Power 30 Higher Education.

Ben Jacobs

The list includes individuals who have spent the past 20 months figuring out new ways to educate students amid the COVID-19 pandemic.

The people on this list have helped Rochester's higher education institutions reimagine themselves rapidly to keep students, faculty and staff safe. They have pushed innovation forward to deal with the challenges of COVID-19. They have kept up with ever-changing protocols, requirements and recommendations and have led the way through a period of tremendous uncertainty.

As with our previous Power Lists, this one is presented in alphabetical order. And again, rather than tell you about all of these power players' accomplishments and accolades, we decided to give them a chance to tell you more about themselves through their answers to a few different questions.

I welcome any feedback you have at bjacobs@bridgetowermedia.com.

Ben Jacobs
Associate Publisher and Editor

Power 30 Higher Education 2021

Denise Battles

SUNY Geneseo

Daan Braveman

Harter Secrest & Emery

Gerard Buckley

Rochester Institute of Technology

DeAnna R. Burt-Nanna

Monroe Community College

Gloria Culver

University of Rochester

Linda Delene

College at Brockport

Ellen Granburg

Rochester Institute of Technology

Anne Haake

Rochester Institute of Technology

Joyce P. Jacobsen

Hobart and William Smith Colleges

Heidi Macpherson

College at Brockport

Sarah Mangelsdorf

University of Rochester

Roosevelt Mareus

College at Brockport

Jacqueline Mozrall

Rochester Institute of Technology

David Munson

Rochester Institute of Technology

Robert Nye

Finger Lakes Community College

Beth Paul

Nazareth College

Sarah Peyre

University of Rochester